ARMY CORRESPONDENCE. A Wet Day in Camp-The Virginia Troopers-Magoffin's Message Accidental Shooting-Fatal Allray.

Yesterday would have passed creditable wwhere for November weather. All the day, from the grey dawn until after tattoo the rain ponred and drizzled and misted, while drenching fogs hung about the mountain peaks, and brooded low and dismal upon the two rivers. It was the dreariest day that we have had since leaving home, "and the blua eyad girl behind us. Drilling was out of the question. So, to questiars we had to be contined. Books and newspapers are a scures commodity in this region, and our only sources of comfort aud consciation were recumbent posttions before a blazing leg tire, glowing pipes of rara old Virginia tobacco, long laks about the past and the portantous nture, then a snooze, then dinner, and so on. This is about the routine of a rainy day in camp. After our supper of bacon and bread, we had soon of home from a dozen well modulated voices, and just before the hour for extinguishing lights a grand cotillion to the music of Charley

Col. Taylor issued emp orders and read the regulations to the troops this morning. He is a very skillful officer, educated at West Point; was for some time in the United States service, and subsequently studied military tactics in France. They are about two miles from the Capital, and half a mile from the New York Seventh Regiment Camp, in the milest of a codar grove, on an eminance comanding a vice of the entire city and the river approach. They have now with them seventy-six horses, with a complete eamp train. To day the Government—which, by the way, is in much need of these things—horrowed a large portion of the train, and made proposals to buy it.

On an eminence still higger, within halling distance, the Second Connecticut Regiment pitched their tents to-day. The whole camp is shaded by a beautifut grove. They are equally well equipped as the first.

Both these camps were visited by tien. Mansfeld, Commander of this Datrict, who speke in the highest terms of praise of the plans and engineering of the camp. These troops need nothing now, they say, but provisions and a little fighting to keep up their spirits.

Not far from them, to the west on snother hill, is the camp ground of the Rhode Island troops. To-day they were busy moving their quarters at the Patent office to the camp ground. Gov. Spragne has notified the War Department and Gen.

On the 7th of May I was ordered by the Flag Officer to go up to Glowester Point, in the York river, to look after a fortideation that I had praviously discovered. I had proceeded to within two thousand yards of this point when a shot across the bow of the steamer rather astonished mate find that they had mounted their gams. As the range was antirely too great for the Yankea's small gams, I stood in, when another shot came bounding along directly in a line, but a little short. The Yankee is but a small New York ing-bent, and not prepared for an ection with a circle hattery in any case.

Ilowever, I gave the orders for action, fired my two gams at the action many and they fail a little short. In the meanilme the enemy were not idle; two of their shells passed about tan feet over our heads and hurst some twanty yards beyond us. The first of their shot fell all around

The question frequently forces itself upon my mind, and always when I hear one of our pacut, Union-thricking, submission speeches, whether or not the tories and traitors of the Revolution didn't use the very same arguments and language that is used by the l'unionists of the present day. An examination of the question will convince us that they did. Did not the tories of '76 say that the British Government of George iff, was the best Government that the world ever have if they should throw off his tyrannical yoke? Didn't they swear that their alleglauce to the British Crown was paramount to every other oilligation, and that on no condition would they ever reconnect? Didn't they argue that there were neither men nor money sufficient in even though the patriots said that his was a war of aggression, and that he, a tyrant himself, had usurped power that did not helong to him? They did, and I ask, where is the difference in their argument? Any one who looks at the subject will hardly fail to discover the parallel.

Wassington, May 17th.—Major Mulligan's Irish Brigade has been accepted for the wer. The department daily receives bushels of letters from applicants for military and civil places, most of which sek for replies. It has therefore to state that it is the inflexible rule that letters relating to such subjects, though read and filled, are not and cannot be answered.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Senator Bayard publishes a long address to the people of Delaware, vindicating himself from false cherges, and declaring his visit to New Orleans was contemplated more than a year ago, without any anticipation of the exciting events which were occurring diring his visit. He is particularly severe on the Philadelphia newspapers and the support they gave to mob violeure. In conclusion, he says that his term of office does not expire until March, 1864, but sat isfind that civil war cannot be averted, and finding that the public sentiment of Delaware prafers such a result to peaceful separation, he will resign. It will require but a few days after the reassembling of Congress for him to determine this, and he can then act. From Philadelphia.
